MAP OF THE REPUBLIC OF LIBERIA
From Gurley's Report
Made to the Senate of the United States (1850)

GEOGRAPHY OF LIBERIA.
The Republic of Liberia, situated on the coast of Africa, is bounded by the Atlantic Ocean to the west, the Ivory Coast to the east, and the Sierra Leone to the south. It has an area of 11,000 square miles. The climate is tropical, with a rainy season from May to November. The population is about 100,000, consisting of the native Liberians and the American settlers. The principal occupations are agriculture, commerce, and the export of rubber and ivory.

HISTORY OF LIBERIA.
The settlement of Liberia was commenced in the year 1820, by the American Colonization Society, as a place of refuge for the free negroes and emancipated slaves of the United States. It was a small beginning, but it has gradually increased, and in 1847 the Republic of Liberia was proclaimed. The settlers, who were mostly of the African race, organized a government, and in 1848 the United States recognized the independence of Liberia. The Republic of Liberia has since that time been a free and independent nation, and its commerce and industry have flourished.
